

THE CHAMPION CHRONICLE

VOLUME 20

CHAMPION, ALBERTA THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8TH 1938

NUMBER 36

McIntyre & Company

Phone 6
"Your Hardware Merchants" AND WESTINGHOUSE DEALER

LOCALS

Miss Iva H. Miller and Miss Helen Higgins, who have been holidaying in the States, returned to their homes last week. Miss Miller has taken up her teaching duties at Long Coulee, while Miss Higgins expects to leave shortly for Toronto where she will take up dental nursing.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Newsome entertained at a dinner party on Sunday, August 28, in honour of Mr. James Fraser of Champion. Miss Edith Oatts of Stavely and B. and D. Newsome, who were celebrating their birthday.

The guests of honor were the recipients of many beautiful gifts from those assembled, who included Mr. and Mrs. Jack Muckhorn, Pete Muckhorn, Mr. and Mrs. K. Oatts of Stavely, Miss Marie Gilroy, Mr. and Mrs. Russell and Teddy Russell of Carmangay, Mr. and Mrs. May Hoot, the Misses Bertha and Audrey Root, and Martin Edenoff of Lomond.

G. M. Campbell was a business visitor in Calgary this week.

Fall rye production in Canada in 1938 is estimated to amount to 9,510,000 bushels from 553,500 acres, compared with the 1937 production of 4,579,000 bushels from 700,300 acres, or a yield of 17.2 bushels per acre in 1938 and 6.5 bushels in 1937.

The Japanese Department of Agriculture on July estimated the 1938 wheat crop of Japan at 49,810,254 bushels, an increase of 0.5 per cent over the 1937 crop, and an increase of 9 per cent over the last five-year average.

USED CARS
ALL MAKES
ALL MODELS
40 CARS CARS 40
To Pick From 40
Priced at $50.00 and up
Re-Conditioned

Extra Special-- Beatty copper tub, gas driven power $45.00 washer, going at -

See W. I. HARRIS
CHAMPION, ALBERTA

United We Stand

Agricultural cannot have real strength unless it presents at least a large measure of unity.

The co-operative movement offers a natural medium for close association.

It can be strengthened by practical support.

ALBERTA POOL ELEVATORS

VALUES-FOR THIS WEEK

Malkin's Best Pure Black Currant Jam, per pail 63c
Canning Compound, per packet 5c
Fly Coils Sanitary, 2 dozen for 39c
Catelli's Spaghetti, Soz. size each 5c
Hedlund's Delicatessen Corn Beef & Cabbage, 1 pound 13oz. size each 35c
Bird's Custard Powder, per packet 15c
Kippered Smacks, 4 for 25c
Memphis Seals, 25 seals, 25 labels, 25 rubber bands 10c
Sweet Mixed Pickles, gallon, each $1.19
Mazola oil, pure salad and cooking oil, 1lb. size 25c
Cucumbers for pickling, 50 pounds 60c
Bologna, fresh delivery, 2 pounds 35c
Shamrock lard, 5 pounds 79c
Flash Tobacco, five cut, 1/2 tins each 42c

Phone 34 McCULLOUGH BROS. Phone 34

CHAMPION, ALBERTA

LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. F. Clapp have returned to their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Depue were weekend visitors at Waterton National Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Showman and family have moved into town and are residing in the house previously occupied by J. Gittel.

R. Maxwell arrived Tuesday and Wednesday in Calgary attending the Hairdressers' Convention held in the Palliser Hotel.

Mrs. F. Clever, accompanied by Mrs. A. W. Jopling, Miss R. Jopling, Mrs. W. A. McIntyre and Miss Louretta Clever, spent Saturday in Lethbridge.

The former small residence sold to L. Granlin has been moved to a lot in the east end of town, and will shortly be remodelled and available to rent at a later date.

Mrs. Watkins and Mrs. M. Todd spent a delightful afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. W. Cain recently when they viewed with interest the beautiful gardens and flowers.

The next meeting of the Champion Woman's Institute will be held Tuesday, September 13th, at the home of Mrs. C. G. Taylor, at three o'clock. Mrs. Todd, Constituency Convenor, will speak on "A Glimpse Into the Future."

Mrs. Ruth Anderson and Miss H. E. Farmer have gone to Carmangay, where they will teach for the next term. Miss Anderson has charge of the grades 1 to 4 while Miss Farmer has charge of grades 5 to 8 and is supervisor of music in the school.

The Ladies' Aid will hold a Bazaar on Saturday evening September 10th, commencing at 7 o'clock, in Mr. Alexander's office. There will be the usual good things for sale, rolls, cakes, doughnuts, pies, etc. Come and get your requirements for Sunday.

Mrs. A. Versluis who left last week for Shelby, Montana, to join relatives on a motor trip to California, returned home Saturday evening having received word that her relatives had been in a motor accident before reaching Shelby and would be unable to proceed with the journey. Details of the accident have not been received yet.

K. R. McLean, Optometrist and Optician, 209 and 210 Southland Bldg., Calgary will be in Carmangay at the Drug Store, Tuesday morning, Sept. 20th, and in Champion at the Drug Store Tuesday afternoon.

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

Once a fire comes in contact with your property, certain loss has taken place. You cannot replace the loss only by an extra expenditure. Guard against this replacement with—

INSURANCE
INSURE TODAY
G. K. McLean

LOCALS

N. M. St. Peter of Milk River visited in town Saturday.

S. Lindstedt will reside at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Urquhart during the coming year.

Miss Edna Orr left for Barnwell where she will take up her teaching duties.

Miss Gertrude Versluys of Lethbridge spent the holiday weekend with her parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Weiss and family were Saturday visitors in Lethbridge.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Smith and family have taken up residence in a Carmangay for the winter months.

The regular meeting of the Champion Chapter O. E. S. was held Thursday evening, after a vacation of two months.

Roy Robinson was a visitor in town prior to leaving for Stavely, where he will teach for the ensuing year.

Mrs. R. L. Baker and children have returned from Calgary, where the family spent the summer.

Any one wishing to purchase a secondhand typewriter, see J. D. Henderson at the Drug Store.

R. L. Baker was a patient in the Carmangay hospital over the weekend, suffering from stomach influenza.

Mrs. I. Ditto and family have returned to town, having spent the summer on their farm west of town.

Miss Elsie McLean left Saturday for Nobleford where she resumed her teaching duties Tuesday, September 6.

Miss Evelyn Sletto is staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Voisey for the ensuing school year.

A large number of baseball fans attended the playoffs in Lethbridge on Wednesday of last week and enjoyed some real snappy baseball.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McIntyre were called to Bellevue last week due to the serious illness of Mr. McIntyre's mother, who is in her 81st year. They were able to return home Tuesday, as Mrs. McIntyre showed considerable improvement.

Miss Betty Mulligan has leased the building south of Walker's Barber Shop, on main street, and will open a beauty parlor just as soon as the building has been renovated. Opening announcement will be made later.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Anderson were visitors in town last week, returning from their honeymoon spent in Banff and points in the United States. They will reside in Lethbridge where Mr. Anderson is associated with Kitson's Pharmacy.

Due to the additional number of students attending the local schools, it has become impossible to handle the majority of the van routes with cars as in previous years. As a result, the school board have made vans compulsory. The three now in use are light deliveries with vans built over the box.

MRS. U. G. ANDERSON LAID TO REST

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Louise Anderson were held Tuesday in the United Church with the Rev. Peter Dawson officiating.

Louise Henrietta Anderson was born at Henry, Illinois in 1864, therefore being in her 74th year at the time of her death. On November 12, 1889, she was married to U. G. Anderson. They lived for twenty years in Canton, Illinois, moving to the Champion district in 1910 where they farmed west of town. In 1920 they left the farm and moved to town, where they have since resided.

The late Mrs. Anderson was an active church member, and possessed a very pleasing personality which had endeared her to a large circle of friends who sincerely regret her passing.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband and one sister, Mrs. Morris of Tampa, Florida.

The beautiful floral offerings bore silent tribute to the esteem in which the deceased was held in the district.

The pall bearers were: M. Sisson, Guy Voisey, D. Watkins, U. S. Alexander, I. Fisher, J. T. Stephenson.

Interment was made in the local cemetery, Christensen Bros. of Lethbridge being in charge of funeral arrangements. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to Mr. Anderson in his very sad bereavement.

FLASH! CAMPBELL'S PRESENT

An exclusive showing of Lovely Smart SILK SHEERS and CREPE-FADED DRESSES popular priced from

$2.95 to $6.95

NOTE—Come in Saturday and see them, and remember we have sizes from 32 to 48

CAMPBELL'S

FALL
TRAVEL
BARGAINS
to EASTERN CANADA
SEPT. 24 to Oct. 8

CHOICE OF TRAVEL
in COACHES, TOURIST or
STANDARD SLEEPERS

For fares slightly higher for Tourist or Standard Sleepers in addition to usual berth charges

RETURN LIMIT 45 DAYS

In addition to date of sale

STOPOVERS ALLOWED

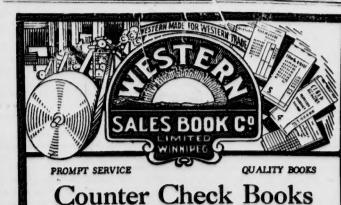

at stations Winnipeg and East

Similar Low Fares From East to Western Canada

For Fares, Train Service and full information ask

CANADIAN PACIFIC

During the first six months of 1938, Canada exported 45,901 cases of canned tomatoes to the British market. In the corresponding six months of 1937, the amount of cases exported was 27,324.

Counter Check Books

Manifolding Forms - Restaurant Checks

Cash Sale Pads

See us for samples and prices
F. O. B. your town.
The Chronicle, Champion, Alta

Farmer's Hardware

For Shelf and Heavy Hardware
Marshall Wells Famous Oils and Greases
FUNERAL DIRECTOR & EMBALMER
Residence 28 ■■■ TELEPHONES ■■■ Store 12
CHAMPION, ALBERTA

Colonization Again

With the recent appearance in this country of Sir Henry Page Croft, C.M.G., M.P., in the interests of assisted British migration to Western Canada, it is natural that the question of immigration to the west on considerable scale, which has lain dormant for some months, has again come into issue.

In view of Sir Henry's aspirations to get things moving in the hope of British settlers being brought out to this country by next year, it is highly probable that a good many more of the proposals of the committee in England, which had a British government financial backing, will be heard during the next few months.

With some of the arguments advanced by Sir Henry and endorsed by Sir Edward Beatty, president of the C.P.R., and J. S. Hungarford, chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, there will be little, if any dispute, but whether or not the time is yet ripe for colonization of considerable numbers in the agricultural districts of the prairie provinces from Great Britain or any other country is another question altogether.

Colonization is a good thing, but

For, if any will be proposed to contradict Sir Henry's dictum, that there is room and a need for a larger population in the prairie provinces, when it is remembered that the railways need more revenue—a point not overlooked by Sir Edward Beatty—and when it is pointed out that other costly facilities, such as highways, have been provided for a much greater population.

It will be conceded by almost anyone that if the overhead costs of these and other facilities could be divisible among a greater number of occupants of the land the burdens of taxation, freight charges and other imposts would be lightened for all, provided there is a sufficient margin of profit in the pursuit of agriculture. These are the arguments of Sir Henry and his supporters in this country that it is highly desirable that the large population as far as possible be met by settlers from Great Britain who in the past have proved themselves adaptable to new conditions and who may regard as natural the standard bearers of the colony's destiny. Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

It is also true, as pointed out by Sir Henry, that many of the best settlers in the earlier years were not life long agriculturists but they made good despite this apparent handicap. The inference, however, that those who went down to the prairie and sowed the seeds and sowed the sweat who came out by the trainload in the halcyon days, nor their descendants, occupy to-day the lands they or their parents originally homesteaded. A very large percentage sold their holdings as soon as possible after they had proved up and many returned to their former avocations in the cities, or took up some other line of work.

With the necessity to-day for saddling the cost of purchased land against the settlers, the lack of experience and knowledge of the problems to be faced, with the complex character of the industry itself to-day as compared with the ease of culture in the earlier years of settlement, the problem of wresting a living from the soil plus a margin of profit in the days when dust and grasshoppers were rampant and when drought did not rob the farmer of the proceeds of his labors, is a very different one.

Greater Stabilization Needed

There are not lacking signs that the scourge of drought is at last passing from the western picture and it appears evident that the rust plague is being checked. The most recent indication of this is the fact that a heavy toll of the farms and crops in the west, the result in the history of the affected area, is estimated that the insects in the space of three weeks have stolen $18,000,000 from the pockets of Saskatchewan farmers; and there is no guarantee that the infestation may not be worse next year. And cover arable land is not the only factor.

Until agreement becomes somewhat more stabilized, trends a little better defined and the industry shows definite signs of emerging from the doldrums which it had in recent years, it would seem inadvisable and even unlikely to permit colonization on considerable scale on the part of a large number who are not fitted to cope with conditions and who are expected to become self supporting in two or even in three or four years.

Training Ship Lost

The Hamburg American Line announced it had given up as lost its cadet training ship, Admiral Karpfanger, missing in Antarctic waters with a crew of 60 for six months. The ship had been en route from Germany to Australia, leaving the South Australian port of Geirmein. It was believed the vessel hit an iceberg.

A large oak tree may have enough leaves to cover two acres, if spread in a carpet.

At the first sniffle

...Quick! use this generalized aid for nose and upper throat... when colds start. Helps prevent many colds.

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

Overeating isn't considered healthy, but the Duke of Queensbury, "Old Q.", was the mightiest eater of the 18th century and lived to be 85. His regular day's menu consisted of two lobsters, a ham sandwich, two lunches with a half-brown, five dinner-mission and five other meals.

Magnate "Hypnot" states "Put on a wurtz and venus will cause the wurtz to disappear is a fallacy!" Of course, it is. Everyone knows a wurtz should be rubbed with a gold ring—or is it a horse chestnut?

Conscience is the voice that tells you not to do something after you have done it.

Do This If You're NERVOUS

Don't take chances on harmful opiates and psychotropics. They're not the answer to some needs. Get more fresh air, more sleep and exercise. Eat more fruit, vegetables, whole grains and lean meat. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a natural aid in female functional disorders and helps to relieve the symptoms of menopause. It's a natural aid in menopause.

For over 60 years one woman has told the secret of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—let it help YOU!

Mildew can be removed from clothing by soaking the garment in buttermilk.

For World Peace

President Roosevelt's Speech Has Real Significance

This real significance of President Roosevelt's declaration is that it serves notice upon all the peoples of Asia as well as Europe, that the meaning and spirit of the Monroe Doctrine embraces Canada; that a President of the United States has now said, and in the most forcible and takeable way, what all of us felt and believed, but which some, in other countries, may have not understood.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement has an other significance, however.

Actually, in its spirit, it means that the United States, in defence of democracy and free institutions, stands ready to support the freedom of the democracies of England and France.

No more momentous nor heartening statement has come to a tormented world within the past two decades.

In the chancelleries of Europe's and America's capitals, this statement will make a difference.

It has been said often that the United States entered the Great War because of the sinking of the Lusitania.

It is not so. The United States entered the Great War because of the call of the blood; because of the call of common things endangered; because of challenge to what we hold dear, the freedom-loving peoples of the world.

So it would be to-morrow. Let

God's will be done, let all we would go down with her in strength and, no power or influence on earth could keep the great heart and the might of the American people from going to her assistance. That truth, like other great convictions of man, is often little understood in its first stages.

The understanding of it must be mighty, for world peace.—Ottawa Journal.

English And French

Differ Widely In Their Mental Attitude Toward Trouble

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is

within ten or eleven days' time.

The reason for this is that Germany

is regarded as the bête noire of the country's destiny.

Again, however, should be added that the time is ripe.

French, as you know, are a logical and therefore a pessimistic race, says Harold Nicolson, in BBC Listener.

When an Englishman might say "things are not as bad as they look" the French actually believe that the world is within ten or eleven days' time.</p

Complete Your Home
With Brilliant
ELECTRIC LIGHT
Constant-Dependable
POWER
At Low Cost

Now, you, too, can have the comfort and convenience of Electric Light and Power. Dangerous old-style lamps and lanterns may be discarded, replaced by the brilliant Electric Light in house, barn and building. Don't wait any longer! Modernize your home, with Electric Light, also current for your Radio and Phonograph. And, with power for many hand machines — the inexpensive Johnson Pump attachment supplies water for you and all.

Send for FREE Folder

Learn how simple and easy it is to install a Johnson Choke-Horse... Compact, sturdy and strong, Choke-Horse models range in capacity from 100 to 800 watts (from 6 to 32 25-watt lamps may be used) and are built for safe, trouble-free operation. Being located in garage, outbuilding or cellar there is no deterioration from wind and weather, and they will give years of satisfactory service with no attention save for fuel and oil.

JOHNSON MOTORS

399 Monaghan Road — WINNIPEG, MAN.
A Canadian Producer with Sales and Service Across Canada

He went. With the dogs snarling over their fish and mads, the man and woman sat beside the campfire long after the meal was finished.

At last Jack unrolled her sleeping bag and nestled it down with a small windmill. Then said Jack at night. Hammond went back to the fire.

He sat there a long time. Finally he rose, and moving toward her faintly outlined form, knelt there.

"Joseph," he said quietly, "are you asleep?"

The voice fought dust fatigue.

"No, Mr. Hammond."

"My name's Jack."

"I'm not in the air of surprise."

"Listen," he cut in. "I've just thought of something funny. You're none of my business..."

"What I mean," he added hastily, "is that I'm not going to bat or ask questions. You understand that, don't you?"

"Yes — I know that..."

"Just the same," the man went on, "I've thought of something funny. Suppose, for instance, I lent you a little money — you know, to build a shack with. And then —" he added, stilling her exclamation — suppose I did what I could to get things going for you. Suppose, further, that it really would be a whale of a joke on somebody. If you'd take this bunch of supplies you've been dragging through for me, and really start that grey store..."

Five minutes later, Jack Hammond turned away, with a hand at his throat.

"I didn't think she'd cry about it," he mumbled, once more back at the fire. He sat there a long time. The dogs, too, were silent, and went to the dogs disturbed them with a moccasin foot, and rolled in with them. The sun shone the next morning. They were back at camp in an hour. The endless journey began.

Six days later, a struggling mass of humans slipped and slid across the hummocked ice of the Littken river. Hammond came along, passed Jeanne Towner, asked a cheery question, and went onward.

CHAPTER IV.

His thick clothing snarled by frost and soil, Jack Hammond worked with pick and shovel at the bottom of a deep pit. He filled a moccasin bucket with boulders and stone and signaled to McKenna to stop. He was busy these days in London, trying to round the rough handle of an equally crude windlass. He was a beaverlike man of huge shoulders and stocky frame; with a great effort he carried the bucket away and emptied it. Returning he called down:

"Hey, Jack. Ride the bucket up."

"Knocking off work early, aren't we?" Hammond queried, when he poked his head out of the crude effort.

"Look," answered McKenna Joe. With movement of his McKenzie Joe indicated the far-away camp.

It was a new trek from Fournoures. Men were shouting, and hurrying about, mushing their dogs to the first him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told

For Your Preserving

Use It This Year

open with the dogs snarling over their fish and mads, the man and woman sat beside the campfire long after the meal was finished.

At last Jack unrolled her sleeping bag and nestled it down with a small windmill. Then said Jack at night. Hammond went back to the fire.

He sat there a long time. Finally he rose, and moving toward her faintly outlined form, knelt there.

"Joseph," he said quietly, "are you asleep?"

The voice fought dust fatigue.

"No, Mr. Hammond."

"My name's Jack."

"I'm not in the air of surprise."

"Listen," he cut in. "I've just thought of something funny. You're none of my business..."

"What I mean," he added hastily, "is that I'm not going to bat or ask questions. You understand that, don't you?"

"Yes — I know that..."

"Just the same," the man went on, "I've thought of something funny. Suppose, for instance, I lent you a little money — you know, to build a shack with. And then —" he added, stilling her exclamation — suppose I did what I could to get things going for you. Suppose, further, that it really would be a whale of a joke on somebody. If you'd take this bunch of supplies you've been dragging through for me, and really start that grey store..."

Five minutes later, Jack Hammond turned away, with a hand at his throat.

"I didn't think she'd cry about it," he mumbled, once more back at the fire. He sat there a long time. The dogs, too, were silent, and went to the dogs disturbed them with a moccasin foot, and rolled in with them. The sun shone the next morning. They were back at camp in an hour. The endless journey began.

Six days later, a struggling mass of humans slipped and slid across the hummocked ice of the Littken river. Hammond came along, passed Jeanne Towner, asked a cheery question, and went onward.

CHAPTER IV.

His thick clothing snarled by frost and soil, Jack Hammond worked with pick and shovel at the bottom of a deep pit. He filled a moccasin bucket with boulders and stone and signaled to McKenna to stop. He was busy these days in London, trying to round the rough handle of an equally crude windlass. He was a beaverlike man of huge shoulders and stocky frame; with a great effort he carried the bucket away and emptied it. Returning he called down:

"Hey, Jack. Ride the bucket up."

"Knocking off work early, aren't we?" Hammond queried, when he poked his head out of the crude effort.

"Look," answered McKenna Joe. With movement of his McKenzie Joe indicated the far-away camp.

It was a new trek from Fournoures. Men were shouting, and hurrying about, mushing their dogs to the first

CHAPTER IV.

His thick clothing snarled by frost and soil, Jack Hammond worked with pick and shovel at the bottom of a deep pit. He filled a moccasin bucket with boulders and stone and signaled to McKenna to stop. He was busy these days in London, trying to round the rough handle of an equally crude windlass. He was a beaverlike man of huge shoulders and stocky frame; with a great effort he carried the bucket away and emptied it. Returning he called down:

"Hey, Jack. Ride the bucket up."

"Knocking off work early, aren't we?" Hammond queried, when he poked his head out of the crude effort.

"Look," answered McKenna Joe. With movement of his McKenzie Joe indicated the far-away camp.

It was a new trek from Fournoures. Men were shouting, and hurrying about, mushing their dogs to the first him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

"I'm glad I'm not the only one to blame."

Reaction had passed for Hammond; he was only glad he had found her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail?" Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?"

"Can we reach camp?"

"We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another — memory told him that they had been working for him that he was again finally to drop behind. No one noticed him; all eyes were straining straining straining. Hammond moved swiftly on the dark trail.

It was deep dark before he picked up a clear trail. He shouted and went on. Again, after a period of search, he called, and for a third and fourth time. He thought he heard a faint answer.

He began to run, as swiftly as his sticky snowshoes would permit. In the distance, a faint, gray smudge appeared. He shouted anew and went on. At last they heard each other. Jeanne Towner tried to cover her weariness with a smile, meanwhile wiping the welcome, cold moisture of a fur-gloved hand across her forehead.

"Am I bad?" she asked, with an attempt at cheerfulness.

"You were." Relief at finding her had brought a certain reflex. "Why did you drop out?"

That trace broke again. I suppose I worked it longer than I thought. That was it. I was too... I couldn't see anybody. And nobody seemed to come from all directions."

Hammond scowled, but not at her. "I knew damned well that shepherds husky would never make a lead dog."

The girl laughed weakly.

The Chronicle

C. A. Marshall Editor & Publisher

Member Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association and Alberta Press Assoc. PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY at the Chronicle Building, Main Street CHAMPION - ALBERTA

SUBSCRIPTIONS

To subscribers in Canada $1.50 per year. United States, England and Foreign Countries $2.00 per year. All strictly in advance.

ADVERTISING RATES

Contract rates supplied on application.

Classified, strayed, etc., not exceeding 36 words, 5¢ for first insertion, three insertions for $1.00; strictly payable in advance.

Local and Municipal Advertising 12¢ per line for first insertion and per line for each subsequent insertion. Accounts rendered monthly.

Thursday, September 8th 1938

TURNER VALLEY EXHIBIT AT TORONTO EXHIBITION IS BIG ATTRACTION

Western Canada's grain, long a favorite feature at the Canadian National Exhibition, is being briskly elbowed aside by a precocious younger brother this year who has stolen much of the spotlight attention in one of the most elaborate and comprehensive exhibits ever erected here.

Turner Valley, heralded as the greatest oil producing area in the Empire, forms the central theme of an exhibit that presents a collection of miniature working models of oil-drilling rigs and replicas of the Valley which shows in an upper section the foothill country, dotted with tiny derricks, and in a lower section a cross-section of the sub-surface, revealing the formation as reconstructed by geologists. As a synchronized voice describes the area, lights alternately illuminate each section, to direct the observers' attention to different features.

More than a million visitors are expected to see the exhibit, according to the estimate of Exhibition officials. The display occupies one entire wing of the Automotive Building and includes a lounge library where spectators may rest while watching the action displays. These include complete scale models of both rotary and cable drilling rigs, the former's derrick towering 11 feet to the ceiling, complete with blocks, bits, drills, casing, tractors' pumps and other details exactly in proportion.

Object of the exhibit, according to officials of Imperial Oil which erected it, is to attract attention to the developments in Turner Valley during the past two years and to inform Canadians of the problems that were over come to produce and market Canadian oil. Of equal importance, they said, is the desire to attract young Canadians to petroleum engineering as a life-work, so that from Canada may be available the talent to continue development of a comparatively new industry.

Don't Worry you can depend on the REX CAFE CHAMPION

For an excellent meal at a reasonable price. Remember THE REX CAFE FRANK LEONG, Prop.

Classified Ads. Pay

CARMANGAY

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gower will move into town for the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. Gien Peacock of Calgary were Sunday guests at the home of Mrs. Wm Peacock. The wiring has been started for the rewinding room at the Community hall.

Miss Patsey Baldwin left to take up teaching duties in a school near Olds.

The Women's Auxiliary will hold their regular meeting in the town office on Saturday at 8 p.m. Be sure to come.

The attendance at the Tree Planting was not as large as in other years, owing to the harvest rush.

Phil Low and son, Phillip, were guests at the home of the former's mother, Mrs. Mart Low, on Labor Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Douglas of Peacock Siding expect to move into town and will occupy a house west of the railway.

The Rosenberger house has been rented to Mr. and Mrs. Orville Smith, who are moving in for the winter. Their three children will attend school here.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bond and infant son, of Gleichen, were fast guests at the O. L. Taylor home on Sunday, enroute to Pincher Creek to visit Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Burns.

Rev. and Mrs. R. Taylor and daughter, Miss Margaret, were holiday visitors in Milk River on Monday, when their many friends were delighted to see them again.

Albert Troskey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Troskey, left this week for Canada where he will attend Normal. Before leaving, a few of his friends presented him with a gift and best wishes for the future.

Following a summer recess, the North Priscilla club met at the home of Mrs. John Nelson. The members were delighted to get together again and a general good time was enjoyed. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess.

A number of young people gathered at the home of Mrs. George Greene on Wednesday evening and proceeded to the Jack McDougall home to honor Miss Marjorie McDougall on the occasion of her birthday. Being a beautiful summer evening, games were played outdoors and a sumptuous lunch was thoroughly enjoyed by the light of a big bonfire. Marjorie was presented with a gift from her friends with their best wishes for many more happy birthdays, for which she thanked them most graciously.

CAN IT BE DONE? = By Ray Gross

Do you think this idea is practical? Write Ray Gross in care of this newspaper.

THE CHRONICLE, CHAMPION, ALBERTA

Dr. DAVID NICOL
DENTAL SURGEON
In Champion Friday only

CARMANGAY

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Glendening of Carmangay West have a a their guests Mr. Harper Glen and daughter, Mrs. Ethel Stockton, of Long Beach, California.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Admitted to Town Hospital: Allen Nelson, Barlow;

Doris Clarkes, Nobford;

Joyce Anderson, Claresholm;

Norma and Delrose Lamb;

Dermie and Donald Copeland, Balfour;

Elaine and Keith Groves, Champion;

Rosemary McMillan, Carmangay;

Leona Ell, ";

Irl Miller, ";

Dora Mueller, ";

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Ernest Allan, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Admitted to Hospital:

John Miller, Champion;

Andrew McGraw, ";

R. L. Baker, ";

Wm Sevren;

Mr. L. Brandvold, Carmangay;

Mrs. Andrew McMillik, Nobford;

Mrs. Charles McMillin, ";

Miss Betty Sheword, Barons;

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.

Discharged:

Philip Nigis, Barons;

John Miller, Champion;

R. L. Baker, ";

Mrs. Milo Siebeck, Travers.